

A Reading & Conversation With

Beth Macy

Beth Macy is the author of three bestselling nonfiction books about marginalized people in America. Based in southwest Virginia for three decades, her reporting has won many national awards, including a J. Anthony Lukas prize and a Nieman Fellowship in Journalism from Harvard. Her 2018 book, Dopesick: Dealers, Doctors, and the Drug Company That Addicted America was called a “masterwork of narrative nonfiction” in The New York Times and named to more than a dozen Best Books of 2018 lists.
