

Baruch's Black and Latino Studies Department (BLS) will host a special digital campaign highlighting Black history and Black voices at Baruch. It also celebrates 50 Years of BLS at Baruch. This campaign by faculty and students will include reflections from students, faculty, and staff, captured in short videos posted to Instagram and YouTube that explore different aspects of Global Black Histories in meaningful ways — including insights on art, music, feminism, food, and politics. All content will end with links to resources where viewers can learn more about how to engage with their communities on these topics and more. Each digital entry throughout the month will be shared on the Black and Latino Studies Community page as well as its social media channels. The department will host an Open House on February 18 during club hours.