⁶ Students are strongly advised to take PSY 220 - Behavioral Statistics (equivalent to PSY 2100 at Baruch College). Although MAT 150 will transfer as STA 2000 at Baruch College, and also satisfies Baruch’s prerequisite for the Psychology major and the Pathways MQR requirement, PSY 220 provides a better preparation for Research Methods in Psychology at Baruch (PSY 3001). If a student has taken both MAT 150 and PSY 220, MAT 150 will transfer as an elective credit and PSY 220 will transfer as the prerequisite and Pathways MQR course.

⁷ PSY 2100 is only needed if neither MAT 150 nor PSY 220 were taken and passed at BMCC. MAT 150 transfers as STA 2000. PSY 220 transfers as PSY 2100. Although the Psychology Department prefers students satisfy their statistics prerequisite with PSY 2100/PSY220, we will accept MAT 150 if they have not taken PSY 220.

⁹ PSY 2100 is only needed if neither MAT 150 nor PSY 220 were taken and passed at BMCC.

¹¹ Students should consider the prerequisites for the 4000-level capstone courses when considering their 3000-level foundation/elective course choice. Students interested in 4000-level I/O courses (i.e., 4010, 4013, 4181-4185) must take PSY 3181.

¹² All 3000-, 4000- and 5000-level courses can count as electives.

¹³ All 4000- and 5000-level courses count toward the capstone requirement except PSY 4035 and PSY 5030.
