Anthony J. Tamburri is the Dean of the John D. Calandra Italian American Institute (Queens College, CUNY) and Distinguished Professor of European Languages and Literatures. Evenly divided between Italian and Italian American studies, his extensive research covers literature, cinema, and cultural sciences. He has authored sixteen books and more than one hundred essays and is editor of over thirty volumes and journals. Among his most recent publications are The Columbus Affair (New Fairfield, CT: Casa Lago Press, 2021) and Signing Italian/American Cinema: A More Focused Look (Glenside, PA: Ovunque Siamo Press, 2021). In addition to his scholarly and editorial work, he is executive producer of the TV program Italics.

Professor Tamburri joins us via Zoom to lead a discussion on some key questions surrounding Italian American studies evident in its literature and cinema. The conversation will focus on cultural identity, social class, race, gender, as well as immigration, and bilingualism.
